Loss of dear friend and distinguished Professor Prodromos Dagtoglou

The EPLO was deeply saddened to learn of the loss of PRODRAMOS DAGTOGLOU, a distinguished professor, long lasting friend of the Organization and a member of its scientific council, the European Group of Public Law .

The deceased was an internationally distinguished Greek law student and professor at the Athens Law School, where he taught as a full professor from 1976 until his retirement from active service and his appointment as Professor Emeritus in 1997. In addition to administrative law he also taught constitutional law, civil rights, press and broadcasting law and initially European Community law and later EU law. He authored textbooks and scientific books, monographs, studies and articles in all three areas, which he always considered an integral part of the single branch of Greek and European public law.

The scientific activity of the deceased in the various fields of legal science has been enormous and unprecedented in the international arena.

Prodromos Dagtoglou sealed his time in the areas of Public, Comparative and European law.

EPLO extends its deepest condolences to his family.
