Meeting of the EPLO Board of Directors

With the presence of representatives of States, Universities, Public Authorities and International Organizations – members of the European Public Law Organization (EPLO) – the annual meeting of the EPLO Board of Directors took place on Thursday 13 September at the EPLO premises in Sounio, Greece.

Prof. Spyridon Flogaitis, EPLO Director, welcomed all the participants and continued to chair the meeting. He specially thanked Prof. Giuliano Amato, former Prime Minister of Italy and founding member of the Organization.

The first topic on the meeting's agenda included the announcement of the new Board members, bringing the total number of members to 2 International Organizations, 13 States, 3 Public Authorities and 60 Universities and institutes located in 32 countries around the world.

Then, an overview of the activities and developments of the Organization, and in particular its participation in international fora and conferences, its cooperation agreements and potential future collaborations were presented.

The existing structure of the Organization and its prospects, both in terms of its internal structure – sections and associates – and in terms of strategies and internal processes, was one of the key issues on the agenda.

Research and institution building activities, as well as managerial and workforce aspects, were additional issues that were raised.

The Board members shared the conclusion that the annual activity of the Organization was very creative and consistent with its purposes.

After the meeting, the members departed for the island of Spetses, where the European Group of Public Law Annual Reunion was held for the 23rd consecutive year.
