

27/05/2016

A lecture by Rochelle C. Dreyfuss

The European Public Law Organization (EPLO) organizes in cooperation with the Institute of Studies in Competition Law and Policy (IMEDIPA) a lecture by Rochelle Cooper Dreyfuss, Professor of Law at New York University School of Law and Co-Director of the Engelberg Center on Innovation Law and Policy.

The lecture will focus on the topic: "Does IP Need IP? Accommodating Intellectual Production Outside the Intellectual Property Paradigm" and the event will be held on Friday, May 27, 2016 from 5:30 PM to 7:30 PM at the EPLO Premis in Athens. (Plaka district, entrance of the Roman Agora. Dioscuron Street and Pikilis Square).

The event will be chaired by:

- Prof. Ioannis Lianos, UCL & IMEDIPA

Interventions by:

- Dr. Aristos Doxiadis, OpenFund - Daphne Papadopoulou, Hellenic Copyright Organization (OPI)

- Maria Sinanidou, Hellenic Copyright Organization (OPI)

- Professor Nikos Vettas, IOBE/AUEB

BIO: Rochelle Cooper Dreyfuss holds BA and MS degrees in chemistry and spent several years as a research chemist before entering Columbia University School of Law, where she served as articles and book review editor of the Law Review. After graduating, she was a law clerk to Chief Judge Wilfred Feinberg of the US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and to Chief Justice Warren Burger of the US Supreme Court. She is a member of the American Law Institute; she served as a reporter for its Project on Intellectual Property: Principles Governing Jurisdiction, Choice of Law, and Judgments in Transnational Disputes and is currently an adviser on its Restatement Third of Conflicts of Law project. She is also an expert on the report of the UN Special Rapporteur on cultural rights regarding patent policy and the right to science and culture.